THE STOMACH THE CAUSE

CHICAGO, August 16—A private dispatch from the president's bedside says The president is better than yesterday afternoon and about the same as at midnight There is no trouble with the wound but is all stomach All depends upon the present means of nourishment proving sufficient until the stomach begins to act There is less alarm in the White House than out of it Slight improvement is reported since the morning bulletin and no further nausea

MACVEAGH DESPONDENT

CHICAGO, August 16, 11 70 a m—Private special information agrees that the physicians at the White House are far less alarmed than outsiders MacVeagh, who says he has given up hope has been despondent almost from the first. Nothing reliable as to the president's condition further than information in the bulletins is received

AN ANXIOUS DAY INDICTED

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 16 11 15 A M—Private Secretary Brown came from the surgeons' room a few moments ago and reported the president as then sleeping No morphia has yet been injected and there has been no report of nausea since 8 a m Two enemates have been successfully administered since midnight Secretary Brown says the morning dressing showed the wound to be in a perfectly healthy condition Members of of the cabinet arrived at various times during the early morning Attorney General MacVeagh, accompanied by Dr Agnew, came to the Executive Mansion about half past seven When he returned from the private part of the house he expressed the opinion that while there was yet hope, the patient was certainly in a very critical condition There is a noticeable despondent expression visible on every face of those having access to the president's chamber, and the greatest reticence is observed, especially by the attending surgeons, who do not enter the business portion of the house unless absolutely necessary The despondent expression of Attorney-General MacVeagh was especially noticeable Shortly after 9 o'clock the cabinet officers, with the exception of Lincoln, who arrived at a later hour, having just returned from New York, left the White house for their respective departments The day bids fair to be one of anxious waiting The midday bulletin is anxiously waited for

THE LOSS DISPATCH

NEW YORK, August 16—The Post's Washington 7 30 a m special says The president still lives and hopes are cherished that he will yet recover The trouble is entirely with his stomach If its power is not gone recovery is yet possible The president passed a comfortable night except that he was troubled by retching about three o'clock this morning He slept well and without the aid of morphia Dr Bliss and the physicians have been troubled by his stomach from the beginning, and from the first treated it with great care If it can have rest now by the administration of nourishment injections it may possibly humble to resume its functions before the exhaustion gets too great to be overcome To-day will probably be a day of suspense rather than incident He is disposed to sleep and nothing will be done unnecessarily to disturb him

INTERVIEW WITH DR EDISON

EXECUTIVE MANSION, 1 p m Miss Edison, one of the attendants upon the president retired at four o'clock this morning and did not leave the mansion for her home until noon Previous to her departure she said the president's case this time was certainly critical, but she still hoped for his recovery The trouble with the president's stomach evidently had nothing to do with the condition of the wound which is nearly healed This new trouble, she said is perfectly understood by the surgeons, and they all have the same idea of it The president understands the exact situation and has been told that his stomach demanded absolute rest and that no attempt would be made for the present to give him nourishment in the regular manner The lady expressed the hope that by to-morrow the patient's stomach would be strong enough to retain something She says the president looks better than he did yesterday

WHAT DR BLISS SAYS

EXECUTIVE MANSION August 16—1 51 p m—Doctor Bliss entered the Executive Mansion a few moments ago to attend to the room examination On being approached by a representative of the associated press he said In a general way that he considered the patient better than yesterday, whereupon the following dialogue ensued

Reporter "Well doctor what are the real chances

Bliss The chances are indefinite, I have not seen the patient for an hour or so, but he was better than yesterday when I first saw him and of course we take encouragement from that

Reporter The midday examination will be very important, will it not?

Bliss Oh yes! for instance if the temperature should fall much below the normal point the case would look very badly, particularly so if the pulse should rise

Reporter "Do you expect this

Bliss No we do not but of course we cannot predict with any degree of certainty what will be the result

Reporter "You have not given up the case then"

Bliss Emphatically no no We do not give it up

Reporter Have any intimations been given the family to prepare for the worst"

Bliss No, sir It has not come to that

The doctor then proceeded to the sick chamber appearing perfectly calm and composed

OTHERS LOSING HOPE

WASHINGTON, August 16—Ex-Sheriff Dugget, of Brooklyn who is near to administration circles gives up hope He says Secretary Brown is hopeful but he does not like the looks of the doctors who betray a decided anxiety Even this morning Dr Bliss said the situation was better than last night when it looked very dark and serious The cause of all the trouble however is with the stomach "We have not given any nourishment to-day and may not All depends on the constitution Last evening he could not take even milk We hope his life can be sustained by injections till we can repair the tone of the stomach" The doctors disagree on this point Secretary Lincoln is reported as saying that the case will be decidedly dangerous unless the president is nourished inside of forty-eight hours It is impossible to sustain life sometimes by enemata

ANXIETY IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, August 16—The anxiety over the condition of the president is hourly increasing The streets in the immediate vicinity of the various newspapers are thronged with thoughtful looking men in search of the latest news from the president On Printing House Square and Park Row and Wall street the excitement is most noticeable Telegraph offices are besieged by anxious seekers after some consoling news from Washington but an ominous silent shaking of the head and a sad look of the majority shows a feeling of uneasiness painful to witness

THE CABINET MEETS

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 16, 4 10 p m All members of the cabinet with the exception of Secretary Blaine, are now in consultation in the cabinet room

WHAT WOULD BE FAVORABLE

WASHINGTON August 16—The opinion prevails at the mansion among those thoroughly conversant with the president's condition, that should the temperature after noon dressing be below normal and the pulse become more frequent the gravity of the situation will be increased If, on the other hand, the temperature should remain normal or decrease a little and the pulse keep up, the situation would be considered unchanged A stationary temperature and an improved pulse would be most favorable indication At the present time nothing directly from the sick room has been received since the facts above stated

THE FEELING IN WASHINGTON

There is a general feeling of anxiety throughout the city As usual there are many rumors on the streets, such as pulse increasing rapidly" "It is known the president cannot recover," etc There is no foundation for them beyond what has been stated

NO CHANGE SINCE MORNING

WASHINGTON, August 16—Dr Hamilton is expected to arrive about 10 o'clock to-night Dr. Reyburn, as he was leaving the White House, was asked if he considered the 1 30 bulletin indicating cause for alarm He replied "There is no perceptible change in the president's condition since this morning

SADNESS AND GLOOM everywhere

WASHINGTON August 16—3 01 p m—The last bulletin has cast a gloom over the attaches of the Executive Mansion, and the greatest anxiety prevails The change which has occurred is well nigh incredible in the explosion and conversation of Private Secretary Brown who leaves from the first alarm that the most sanguine opinion that the president would recover Secretary Hunt who met a few minutes ago If he could say anything regarding the present condition of the president said in a tone which showed he was deeply affected that there was absolutely nothing to say Everything that could be said was now known The extreme quiet which pervades the mansion and even the offices occupied by the clerical force is almost oppressive Conversation is carried on in monotones, and a great feeling of anxiety and actual alarm is plainly perceptible The most sanguine are apparently first losing hope and officers may be seen leaving the mansion with a look of despair upon their faces While this feeling of despondency is very general there are those who yet maintain that the patient will rally, whom may be especially mentioned Generals Swaim and Rockwell Mr Garfield is said to be as cheerful as the circumstances will allow and that she entertains a strong belief that her husband will recover Dr Agnew is quoted as saying said this evening that the patient was no weaker than yesterday and that there was every reasonable hope of his rallying This statement, however, is not obtained in a direct manner Whatever may be said there is no denying that the condition is extremely critical at the present moment and that unless a favorable change occurs within a short time it will prove fatal

AN OMINOUS SILENCE

WASHINGTON, August 16—At 3 45 there was nothing definite to be learned at the White House except that the president was no better An ominous silence and quietude prevails Nothing could be had from the surgeons There is no improvement

DR BLISS OPINION

EXECUTIVE MANSION 5 10 p m—Dr Bliss says his opinion is that the president has more than ever a chance to get well He is retaining the nourishment which has been administered during the day and taking every thing into consideration the case still looks hopeful The following cablegram was received by the British legation this afternoon

FROM THE QUEEN

The queen is sorry for the president's relapse, and inquires after him

(Signed) PARSON

A CRITICAL DAY FOR THE PATIENT

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 16, 10 p m Today has undoubtedly been the most unsatisfactory one of the president's illness The early morning showed signs of less hope for the president's recovery and the cabinet officials and others of the minor offices called at the White House to obtain indications With a few exceptions the official bulletins have been referred to as answers to interrogators as to the patient's condition

BULLETINS READ WITH ANXIETY

WASHINGTON, August 16—10 20 p m—Eager conversations as to the probabilities of the president's recovery were freely indulged in before the bulletin was brought from the surgeons room The excitement, although of a quiet nature, was quite intense, fears being entertained that the temperature would be shown to have fallen below normal, which is about 98 4 Dr Bliss brought the bulletin from the surgeons' rooms and the moment he appeared in the secretary's apartment it was apparent there were no extremely unfavorable symptoms He assistant secretary prudently took the bulletin from the doctor and read aloud to the anxious gathering It was stated by Dr Bliss, immediately after the reading was concluded, that the bulletin in his opinion considering the circumstances, was a favorable one A good feature in the bulletin was the rise in temperature, which is 6 10 of a degree higher than at noon, and also above the normal, which is an indication that there is still some material left for the fever to work upon

The vomiting referred to in the official bulletin is explained to have been very slight and was the result of the patient's drinking ice water It appears that after drinking he expressed a desire to be turned upon his side and the disturbance of his body is supposed to have irritated the stomach again which is now extremely weak The only nourishment the patient had to-day has been enemata which, as shown by the bulletin, have been retained While the evening bulletin has had the effect of warding off all apprehensions of a crisis during the night still there are grave fears that the morning will not bring much encouragment, owing to his extremely debilitated condition It has been impossible to ascertain anything from the sick room since the evening bulletin was issued This is considered an unfavorable indication, as the surgeons have been quite communicative of late to the cabinet officers A member of the cabinet has just said that up to this hour nothing had been learned from the surgeons since the bulletin was issued Mrs Garfield, accompanied by her son James, took a drive in the evening of about an hour's duration The lady endeavors to be cheerful and she continues to bear herself bravely with great fortitude

ANOTHER INTERVIEW WITH DR BLISS

EXECUTIVE MANSION August 16—10 25 p m—Dr Bliss just came from the sick room going to the depot to meet Dr Hamilton The following conversation occurred between a reporter and himself

How is the president? was asked of him

No worse, but asleep now

Do you feel as confident as two hours ago?

Yes and I feel a little better

Was any morphia administered this evening

None at all There has been no vomiting this evening The injected nourishment is retained enough to keep it going until the stomach begins to act

Then you feel it will do so?

I hope

You feel encouraged since the bulletin was issued

I think we added I feel encouraged

Mr Garfield was made cheerful when the pulse was about 114 temperature about 98 or slightly above the normal and respiration 18 or 19

THE MANSION CLOSED FOR THE NIGHT

WASHINGTON August 16 11 The mansion has just been closed for the night Secretary Brown just announced to the anxious waiters and reports the president sleeping quietly at this hour also that his pulse has grown less frequent within the last two hours and no vomiting has occurred since 4 a m

THE MIDNIGHT BULLETIN

EXECUTIVE MANSION August 16 midnight—Everything is quiet about the mansion There are no indications of an unfavorable change in the president's condition Dr Hamilton was driven directly to Attorney General MacVeagh's and will not visit the mansion until the morning

A CONSTANT PATIENT

EXECUTIVE MANSION August 16—Immediately after the evening bulletin was issued Dr Bliss remarked that it was an exclusive statement of the case and a merciful sparing an injection of improvement

A BRIEF VISIT

CHICAGO August 16—From all that can be learned the president seems to be a little better this evening than during the day He vomited once during the afternoon

CALLERS AT THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON August 16—At noon Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court, called at the White house The vice president is hourly advised of the president's condition It is stated that his presence here is not absolutely necessary even in case of the worst as he can take the oath in New York before the chief justice of the district court as well as here before the supreme court

The president has been for years under the tutelage of Dr Baxter for indigestion, for which reason he will at evening entertain friends He suffered greatly during the campaign Windom and wife and MacVeagh and wife were at the White house until 11 30 a m Windom at noon said the case was more favorable but MacVeagh only said, He is no worse At 11 30 Chin Lom Pan, the Chinese minister called and Mrs Garfield received him in the Blue room He conveyed messages from the Chinese emperor

GENERAL BOYNTON CONFIDENT

NEW YORK, August 16 Gen Boynton telegraphed his brother here that the president is better than yesterday and about the same as at midnight There is no trouble with the wound, but all the trouble is with the stomach Everything depends on the present means of nourishment proving sufficient until the stomach begins to act There is less alarm in the White house than out of it A slight improvement is reported since the morning bulletin and no further nausea

SOME HOPEFUL, OTHERS DESPONDENT

NEW YORK, August 16—The Post's Washington special reports Doctor Bliss says the stomach is now resting If the strength of the patient can be sustained by injection till the digestive organs recover it is possible for him to get well Of course if the stomach has given out that ends it This cannot be known yet, and until the fact appears, we must watch and wait If he passes the day without vomiting, and the pulse falls rapidly and gains in firmness, we may hope he will yet be saved The retching continues and the pulse does not mend The public should understand that the end is probably near James, who has been always hopeful said this morning that his information made him somewhat easier than yesterday, but this fine was not hopeful, but was weary anxious and far less reassuring than his words MacVeagh always despondent looks utterly hopeless and says he does not expect recovery His friend Dr Agnew, however, does not inspire this view of the case The surgeons are more hopeful

THE VICE PRESIDENT AT HOME

NEW YORK, August 16—The vice president passed this morning very quietly at his residence, and said he had heard no further tidings from Washington and did not intend starting for the capital until sent for

THE CABINET MEETING

WASHINGTON, Aug 16—Intimations were dropped during the afternoon that when the cabinet was called together it was thought that some official act was about to be promulgated but this proved erroneous The object of the meeting which took place between four and five this afternoon was simply to hear in a body the statement of the attending surgeons on the situation with a view of ascertaining the exact state of affairs Dr Bliss was called upon to convey the desired information He talked for some time, and while he stated explicitly the gravity of the situation, he was hopeful and maintained that the president had at least an even chance for recovery This expectation was sufficiently clear to establish to a considerable extent the confidence of the cabinet officers and they expressed themselves as feeling more hopeful after the conference After the cabinet officers left, it became known what had taken place and decidedly better feeling prevailed throughout the mansion and although the chances of recovery were far from satisfactory, they were accepted with much satisfaction and some change The decided cheerfulness which had pervaded the house all the afternoon to a general feeling of hopelessness

The anxious crowds were forced to yield to unfavorable indications during the early afternoon but previous to the issuing of the 1 30 bulletin the expressions of Dr Bliss had been so well known and their effect was noticeable shortly before the bulletin was issued Private Secretary Brown's room commenced to fill with callers among whom were Associate Justice Harlan Third Postmaster General Hazen Representative Dwendorff of Virginia and First Auditor Lewis

ENERGETIC OPINION FROM AN OUTSIDER

CHICAGO August 16—A special from New York says Dr Wm A Hammond in an interview said that the idea that the president was now suffering from dyspepsia was all bosh He is suffering simply from pyæmia ever since the recent chill The vomiting and irritation of the stomach are caused solely by the presence of the bullet in his body, and there is now no hope for the president and I give him but three or four days to live He has not be given the proper character of food and has been reduced every five pounds in weight This treatment has done more for him than I see no chance of recovery

A CABLE TO LOWELL

The following cable gram was sent to-night To Lowell Minister London

Since noon a slight rise in temperature has occurred The president vomited but once during the afternoon The nourishment enemata retained His condition on the whole is better than yesterday

THE TILDEN DEMOCRACY.

Principles to be Observed in the New Campaign

NEW YORK, August 16—The Times says The outline has gone forth from Daniel Manning, the new leader of the Tilden democracy of New York that the democratic state convention to nominate a state ticket this fall shall be held either at Albany or Saratoga. The work for the convention is already laid out The general principle to be observed in Tilden's new campaign is one of compromise The anti Tilden men are to be conciliated and if need be bribed by good places on the democratic ticket The wisdom of beginning early with this programme is evident. This year only a portion of the state officers will be chosen Tilden with absolute control of the state committee and with every probability of his being able to control the state convention, will lay this year the foundations of a scheme which will next year result in his nomination for governor and will finally be crowned in 1884 by his nomination for president. The Tribune says of the proposed union of the democracy It is proposed that Tammany and Irving halls unite and the various democratic organizations big and little, shall send delegations to confer with the state committee as to the proper recognition of each incoming contention Every faction and every thing like a personal organization from that of Oswald Ottendorffer or Andrew H Green up to Tammany hall shall send delegates to represent and advocate its claims to a voice in the convention and share in local offices

EXTREMELY DANGEROUS

Allison and his Pals Taken no Further than Pueblo

Yesterday's GAZETTE announced the discovery, in charge of Sheriff Joe Smith of Conejos county, left for the south on the morning train but the following from the Chieftain would indicate that they got no further than Pueblo "Yesterday's train from Denver brought into the city Sheriff Joe Smith of Conejos county, and Frank Hyatt, a resident of the same county and a deputy-sheriff They had in charge Charles Allison and his two accomplices who have made life a terror in Southern Colorado for some time past This gang, it will be remembered, was nabbed at Albuquerque New Mexico several weeks ago, and taken to Denver for safe keeping, for the time being it being considered extremely dangerous at that time to lodge them in the Conejos county jail where they belong The officers were en route to Conejos county with the prisoners, we learned from Sheriff Smith but upon reaching Pueblo news was received that a mob was awaiting the arrival of the prisoners at Alamosa, and that it would be impossible to take them through there without a very strong guard, hence the officers decided to leave the prisoners in the Pueblo county jail, in charge of Sheriff Price until the next term of the district court in Conejos county which occurs some time in November The prisoners were all heavily handcuffed and shackled, and Sheriff Price and his deputies at once hustled the prisoners into a hack and conveyed them to the county jail, where they now are and will remain until the next term of court in Conejos county, when they will be taken there for trial Smith and Hyatt left on the afternoon train for the south They expressed themselves as as having no fear but what they could get the men through all right, but it might result in bloodshed, hence the safer alternative was adopted Allison and his pals expressed themselves as willing to try it if the officers would give them a chance for their lives, but, as before stated the officers thought better of their first resolution and left them here, where they at least will be safe for the present The reason for taking the prisoners to Conejos was the expense of keeping them in the Arapahoe county jail Conejos county has a jail of its own, and the authorities were of the opinion that that was the place for the prisoners to be housed The wisdom of such a course is of course better understood by those most interested, though there are many who have not forgotten the difficulty of getting these notorious outlaws away from the south after their capture The officers, however, thought that the feeling was much stronger against the prisoners at that time than now and that consequently the prisoners could be successfully removed from Arapahoe to Conejos county The news received at this point, however that a reception awaited the gay and festive rough, caused the officers in charge to change their minds and leave the prisoners here It will now be three or four months before the prisoners are removed from the Pueblo county jail, but whenever they are taken out, strategy will have to be used or they will never be landed safely in the Conejos county jail That there would have been trouble if the prisoners had gone through yesterday there can be no doubt, and while they deserve death for their many deeds of outlawry, now that they are in the hands of the law, we believe in the law taking its own course, and all will agree that the officers discharged their duty in the strictest sense of the word"

THE PRESIDENT.

The president still lives, and seems to be going to prove the reports concerning him are more encouraging. There is still a possibility that his vigorous constitution may still enable him to hold his own and overcome the present difficulty. It is now said that the vocal cord is doing well and is rapidly healing, and that the present trouble is simply a stomach one. If this is so, then once the president is enabled to retain solid food again, there will be more chances than even of his recovery.

The excitement is naturally intense. It may be that reports are exaggerated concerning him, and there is some comfort in the thought that there is said to be more alarm felt outside the White House than in it. Mrs. Garfield drove out yesterday, and the fact that she felt able to leave the bedside of her husband is proof that she does not consider him beyond recovery even now. The editors seem more hopeful since the case was explained by Dr. Bliss, and many other signs are encouraging.

It may be confidently expected and believed that everything is being done for the president which the highest medical knowledge in the country can suggest. And he has, moreover, the prayers and sympathy of the people, irrespective of class and political opinion. While still spared to us the nation will watch anxiously for hopeful symptoms, and it is to be hoped that today will bring relief to the one all are so earnestly hoping will be able to overcome the present difficulties.

Vice President Arthur is conducting himself in his trying position with great delicacy and discretion.

Dave Day is one of the most earnest supporters of F. C. Goudy for district attorney in the San Juan district.

President Garfield still lives. He needs and will have the prayers and earnest wishes of this people for his recovery.

The harvest in America promises to be better than was expected. Reports are favorable from Minnesota, but Dakota reports heavy losses and Germany has no prospects of having even an average crop.

The Herald resumes, unfortunately for Senator Teller, the Peck discussion. If it keeps on it may secure the publication of Senator Teller's letters to Judge McMorris and his telegram to the Interior department.

The general sentiment now prevailing is that the president will not recover. This is due in part to the hopefulness that has been inspired from what now appears to have been too sanguine reports by Dr. Bliss and others. The continued disappointments in the reports of improvement have taken away a good deal of confidence. At this writing the reports are by no means encouraging, but still there is hope while there is life.

The movement of gold to this country has already commenced, and is, says the London Times, nearly a month ahead of the usual time. In July 1879, there was no gold exported from England to the United States, but in August that country sent us £632,590, and in November the shipments increased to over two million pounds. So in 1880, there were no shipments in July, but in August large sums were sent. It seems that there can be no stringent money in this country so long as the Bank of England can thus be drawn from.

The Tribune is troubled about the settlement of the Southern Utes in Southwestern Colorado. It undoubtedly would be better for the Indians to be removed entirely from our borders. But it is not creditable to Colorado to be more selfish than any other state. The final settlement of the Utes is not likely to leave more than 1,000 in Colorado. This is a much less number than other western states have. Had Kansas when we were a territory crowded her Indians into Colorado, there would be some excuse for Colorado following the same precedent with Utah, but she did not. Our determination to put all our Indians in Utah and New Mexico, is an exhibition of supreme selfishness. It is well enough for Colorado to look after her own interests, but she should be less hoggish.

The Boston Advertiser says: "Quite likely, Hartmann is not so heartless a criminal as he pretends to be; he is none the less a criminal, and it is good for the country not to harbor too many of these fellows who, on the pretext of being politicians, commit all sorts of fiendish and revolting crimes. Of course, these criminals who look upon a monarchy as if it were crime itself, imagine [illegible]

The society has grown [illegible] and the meetings have [illegible] 1871. There are 1,447 members, and any one interested in science may join. Concerning the meeting the Chicago Commercial says: "Professor Tyndall's [illegible] warning to the American people in his New York address, the admonition not to neglect the higher walks of investigation. In America the opportunities for money-getting are so numerous and so lightening that few pursue the scientific or more satisfying charms of pure intellectual labor. Yet even the practical must be touched by the therapeutical. "Men," as Goldsmith has wisely remarked, "can not be brought to take any vivid interest in anything till it is seen to have some close connection with their bodily well-being." But such a connection, close and indispensable, between our physical comfort and regions of scientific discovery does exist. Not only the science-lover, but the steady man of business has a vital concern in what the thinkers are doing. Were we to remove from our present environment all which has been contributed by the sciences which have bloomed during the last century, we should not have the same world. Science has reached its beneficent power about us in every direction, and we today are encompassed at every turn by the wonders of scientific thought as crystallized into objects of use. All our manufactures are furthered and helped, when they are not absolutely created by the agentical science."

POPULAR CULTURE.

The Contemporary Review has an article in a late number on popular culture as it relates to the working classes. There probably was never a more universally enjoyed opportunity than that now open to working men, women and children of knowing how to read. The system of public education in this country especially, has taught children to read readily the best works of the country, and these young scholars in many instances have taught their parents to read. It is an exception and not the rule nowadays, to find a laboring man unable to read intelligently the newspapers and he could if he would read also the current literature of the day.

Not only can many read, but they may also read the best works of the day. Popular fiction is offered them in cheap forms. The "Sea Side Library" and the "Franklin Square" can be purchased by any one so inclined, and it is a man's own fault if he turns from the books of these instructive libraries and seeks the dime novels and the worthless trash thrown to him with the catching prices for which they may be obtained. The Franklin Square literature is cheap only in price, for it includes the wide range of high-class reading. The books composing it can be obtained by all, and there are also scattered everywhere free libraries, and others with small subscriptions abound.

If then we find a lack of culture in workingmen, and we especially mention this class now, though it might also be said that many who are above being obliged to work are in need of higher culture, it can readily be seen that the culture is lacking not because there are not enough opportunities for self-improvement. The want of general culture arises from the fact that either they do not read at all, or that they read that which cannot even be called literature, the influences of which are altogether bad. Books and papers are selected which establish and cater to a depraved taste. They allure the ignorant reader with their false light. They inflame the innocent minds to such a degree that all taste is destroyed for more wholesome and more instructive works. And yet there never was a time when the vile literature flourished so abundantly as now, or was so cheaply served and when there was so little probability that the lovers of this literature will be driven by limited supply to seek higher grades.

It is a serious question for those who would see a higher culture become more general to know what to do. The situation is worse than a century ago, for more read now than then, and there is more of the useless literature. It is better that workingmen were not able to read at all than that they should ruin their minds with cheap literature. We do not expect that there will be ever a high culture among working classes, but there can much be done to give them good literature in place of poor. Their culture will be a popular one, in a sense that what is universal is popular, and they can still be raised much above their present condition. Just so far as they read what is ennobling and good and instructive they will receive benefit from their power to read. But they should not abuse this power. It is a good field for philanthropists to work in. It will be the best thing they ever did if they will supplant the vile worthless literature with some works equally as cheap and much more ennobling than the dime novels and illustrated papers of adventure and falsehood.

Beaconsfield's Manuscripts.

From the London Standard.

At the late sale of Lord Beaconsfield's effects there was a marked contrast between the prices fetched by the pictures and those at which the manuscripts found purchasers. The Turner works of art were not, perhaps, thought in all cases to be genuine; but as to the authenticity of the latter there could be no doubt. An indifferent Watteau would be cheap at five guineas, the sum for which a "Grand Chasse" attributed to that master was bought; and there is something derisive in the sale of another Derby fly, nominally from the same hand, for [illegible] guineas. An old painting, described vaguely as that of "the English school," was knocked down at [illegible] guineas. A "Virgin and Child, with Elizabeth and St. John," assigned by the author of the catalogue to Rubens, passed into the possession of a spirited bidder for 25 guineas. The largest sum realized by any one picture in the collection was 230 guineas, for which a "Coast Scene" by Copley Fielding was sold, and it is noteworthy that this was only 10 guineas more than the sum paid for the original manuscript of "The Young Duke." "Contarini Fleming," written fifteen years after "The Young Duke," and in all respects superior to it, fetched 200 guineas, the purchaser in this case being Sir Theodore Martin, who probably knows, with Heine, that the novel in question is "one of the most original works ever written." It is rumored that the true buyer of the "Contarini Fleming" manuscript is an exalted personage, who entertained for Lord Beaconsfield's genius and character the highest esteem.

But the amount paid for the two novels just named, as put on paper by their author, are significant in any case as showing the value attached to his direct personal performances. Probably there are not many cases in which the "copy," as it is technically called, of literary works is preserved at all; and, unless he had already an "erogt momentum" sort of feeling, it is strange that the young Disraeli should at 23—the age he had attained when he published "The Young Duke"—have taken the trouble to lay aside the manuscript slips of his novels as they would have been returned to him with his proofs from the printer. By so doing, however, he saved—one might almost say that he created—a value of £231—a sum which many a novelist would at the beginning of his career (and in some cases even at a later period) consider adequate remuneration for the entire copyright of his work.

The "Wondrous Tale of Alroy," setting forth how, in the twelfth century, a prince of the house of David proclaimed himself the Messiah, and called the Jews of Persia to arms, was sold at auction in its manuscript form for 140 guineas, which was, in all probability, more than the printed book produced in the way of profit when, 46 years ago, it was first brought out. The "Rise of Iskander," dealing with the insurrection of "Skanderbeg," as Iskander or Alexander the chief, is sometimes called, brought 90 guineas, and, under the circumstances, this being one of the least popular of its author's productions, it may be considered a large price. The same sum was obtained for the original manuscript of "Ixion in Heaven," a production which was written 12 years later, and commanded much attention at the time of publication. A good idea of the value attached to Lady Beaconsfield's written work is afforded by the fact that when the copyright and stereotyped plates of his "Biography of Lord George Bentinck" were offered for sale no one could be induced to offer for the lot more than £27, apparently an insufficient sum, since it was bought in. It would have been interesting to see what value the manuscript of this work, had it been forthcoming, would have been found to possess; interesting also to know what worth, as estimated by the competitive process, belongs to the copyright of three works which, in their manuscript shape, were disposed of once for all at sums varying from 90 to 220 guineas. Would at this moment the copyright of "Contarini Fleming" meet with a buyer at 200 guineas? Probably it would, notwithstanding the fact that its popularity has been quite eclipsed by later works from the same pen. But there cannot be many publishers, who, as a mere business speculation, would care to invest 220 guineas in the copyright of "The Young Duke," though that, as has been seen, was the sum realized last Friday for the manuscript.

The Tramp Bear.

MODEL BEAR STORY.

The Bachelor-Publisher Adventure With a Bear Ending in a Bear.

From the Washington Star and Herald.

"As I was sitting down picking huckleberries—I had a little black dog with me—I heard the dog barking furiously. I thought somebody was plagueing him; he is a dog that don't like to be plagued. I thought that I would get up and go and see what was wrong with him. So I got up and started with my gall. When I got there I saw a bear as big as a yearling calf. When the dog seen me he run to me and the bear after him. I picked up a stone—he was coming full tilt with his mouth wide open. I fired away with the stone and hit the bear a pretty hard rap along side the head. That made him mad; he growled a little and came right on. I picked up a piece of rock and when the bear came up the dog snapped him on the hind leg. He jumped at the dog; then the dog jumped between my legs; the bear jumped at me and then I struck him on the snout. He snorted and blew the slobbers in my face so I couldn't see for a little bit. Then the bear started off and the dog after him, and bit him in the hind leg again. The bear turned and chased the dog which run behind me; then the bear jumped at me and I struck him again on the snout again and knocked him down and then I run for dear life. I was too scared to tell the truth (we believe him) and the dog after me and the bear after the dog. I lost my hat and pail, but did not dare to stop to pick them up. I run about a half mile, when I stopped and looked back. I saw two more bears coming. They were cubs. Then the dog and old bear came full jump; they all got together. I thought that I was a goner sure, but they all made for the little dog; they fought awhile and I called the dog off. I ran to a tree and climbed it and the three bears started off and the dog after them; he run after the bears about a mile. I tell you if ever anybody made tracks for home I did. That was the first and last berrying that I have done this year. That kind of a bear h'aint to be fooled with. I don't want to see any more bears very soon. I have seen a good many bears in my time, but that was the meanest I ever seen. She struck the dog once and knocked him twelve feet through the brush and the dog got up and started at her again, but was careful to keep out of the bear's paws. I tell you I was glad to get back home alive."

Hartmann, the Nihilist.

N. Y. Letter to Philadelphia Press.

I said awhile back that the Gotham weather was hot. But the only man who found it too hot to be stood at all was a nihilist from Russia—a fellow named Hartmann who came over here to confer with some of our other revolutionists and boodlestossers. Mr. Hartmann was engaged in the railway dynamite plot in Russia months ago. The Herald devoted page after page to him, and if anybody had respect for nihilists before, these interviews must have settled the whole business. After the Herald finished with him the state department took up his case, and it was intimated very plainly that if the Russian government should at any time ask for his extradition on the ground of murder he would be promptly arrested. In America, Mr. Hartmann learned, a murderer—a foreign murderer—is regarded as simply what he is, whether his crime has been leveled at a czar or a peasant. Mr. Hartmann departed at once for Canada. He went almost as fast as a bounty-jumper. He stood not on the order of his going, but skipped. In British territory he is regarded simply as a political refugee, and he is safe. The only thing to regret about the condition of his case in New York is the fact that he was notified of the danger of his position. I think Mr. Hartmann would ornament a gallows about as gracefully as anybody I know. And it is really too bad to rob such an institution of its legitimate embellishments when they come along. Some enterprising kidnapper could earn $100,000 at a haul if he will remove this incendiary gentleman to St. Petersburg. That is the price upon his head, they tell me. It's lucky there's a price upon his head, for he hasn't much hair.

EXCELLENT PROSPECTS

Colorado Springs People Again in Luck.

Mr. L. A. Watt, of this city, in a letter to the Gothic City Miner, conveys the following important information concerning the Dunkin gulch mine, owned by Dr. Lee and several others of this city. "Being recently in Poverty gulch looking at other mines in that very promising camp, I made an unsolicited examination of the Dunkin mine—which I regard as being of unusual promise. I take the liberty of calling your attention to it. The property is owned by Harry Lee, Mining company, Dr. Lee and Col. McCloud. The development has been by tunnel, which has reached a depth of about fifty feet, from which a fine quality of ore has been mined which is high grade, as I saw the following assays made for the purpose of sorting the ore: 1400, 1700, 900 and 1130 ounces per ton, which if closely assorted would run away in the thousands. There is now on the dump several tons of ore, and is on the increase from the daily working which is run day and night. On extending my examination on the surface I am led to conclude from the great number of such veins or lodes converging at certain point that in time development of this property will disclose one of the largest and richest bodies of mineral to be found in the Elk Mountains. As this property has been developed very quickly, nothing ever having been mined in point in regard to the Dunkin mine I trust I may be pardoned for calling your attention to it. It is certainly a matter of simple justice to our camp to let the outside know that we have such mines.

A New Volcano

SAN FRANCISCO, August 16.—A Lewiston, Idaho dispatch says that a volcanic eruption took place on the side of the mountain south of south fork of Clear Water, about twenty miles east of Mount Idaho Tuesday, the 9th inst., sending forth a column of fire and smoke several hundred feet in height, and rock which fell at a distance of several miles from the place of eruption. The shock was distinctly felt at Mt. Idaho on the extreme west of Camas prairie, and at the mouth of the Salmon river, a distance of about seventy-five miles. Later news from Camas prairie reports a column of smoke as issuing from the opening, which is distinctly visible from the prairie. No one as yet has approached the place. Evidences of volcanic action at some former period exists in many places in the immediate vicinity. So far as appears the opening is less than a thousand feet above the bed of the South Fork of Clear Water, and within three miles of Milner trail, between Idaho and Florence.

The Coming Election in New York

PHILADELPHIA, August 16. The Ledger's New York special says: The election of secretary of state, attorney general, treasurer, etc., in November will present a curious spectacle of the two "bosses" whom their parties have recently repudiated trying to recover lost power. "ex Boss" Conkling will certainly be a delegate to the republican convention and it is quite as certain that ex-Tammany boss John Kelly, will endeavor in the democratic convention to recover his former prestige.

Attempt to Wreck a Train

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, August 16.—An unsuccessful attempt was made to wreck an excursion train, having on board five hundred and fifty men, women and children, by laying ties across the track.

A Bad End

Philadelphia Press.

The death in an insane asylum of Orville Grant, the brother of the ex president of the United States the hero of the rebellion, recalls some strange and startling associations. The dead man was, in his youth, the flower of the Grant family. When his great brother Ulysses, came to grief in the army and suffered privation in private life, it was Orville, after the father, Jesse Grant, who sustained the prodigal Ulysses. Ulysses, however, possessed the sterling qualities of Henry V. of England, and rising with the great occasion of the war, discarded his faults and rose to his present great eminence. As Ulysses rose, Orville fell, and despite the favor shown him by the ex president, his decline was rapid. The prosperous business man of Galena and Chicago, who enjoyed a fortune of nearly a hundred thousand dollars while his brother was next door to a pauper, embarked in the most scandalous enterprises of the eastern cities, and soon became known as a conscienceless adventurer who traded on his brother's name. His ruin was only a question of time, and when it came it was complete. He died a poor wreck, in a lunatic asylum. And yet, he was a man of the kindliest impulses, of the most companionable disposition and always exhibited the extreme of paternal and fraternal love.

No Cause for Alarm

Philadelphia Press.

A carefully prepared review of the crop prospects for 1881 of the leading agricultural products, published in this week's Press, collated from reliable sources, does not indicate any such shortage in crops nor boom in prices as would please the enterprising speculator who hopes to make money out of his country's misfortunes. The continued prosperity of the country is evidently assured, no matter what speculators may say or hope for. And this prosperity, following such a fearful winter as the last and the spring not at all propitious, is a good assurance that only an unexampled calamity, or a series of such calamities, can impair the resources of a vast and enterprising country which has in it almost every variety of soil and climate.

A Political Crisis

Mr. Z. L. White in his "Recollections of a Correspondent" in the Providence Sunday Star, relates the following incident of his visit to New Orleans at the time of the electoral complication of 1876:

"I recall one incident which made a deeper impression upon me during that first evening than any other. Among the demonstrators who had gathered there was Congressman William P. Morrison, of Illinois, a man whom I had long known and in whom I felicitated great confidence. He had served gallantly in the union army during the war, and had been badly wounded, but was so modest withal that in furnishing the biographical sketch of himself to be printed in the Congressional Directory did not even mention his military service. He is also a man of great courage of opinion. Resisting in a district where the people were much carried away by the greenback craze, he had been true to the old time democratic doctrine of hard money, and had on more than one occasion made a gallant fight in a democratic state convention in Illinois against a greenback plank that had been reported in the platform, and with the aid of a few others had defeated it. In the house of representatives at Washington his was a place in one of the committee of ways and means, a position for which he was not fitted, but in which he had been placed by Speaker Kerr as a reward for his personal services in the speakership campaign. Such a man I expected to hear, and, if my memory was and, after the crowd had thinned out a little we went aside and sat down together for a talk. He was greatly excited and looked with great apprehension upon the contest which he foresaw. He thought that it would be almost impossible to avoid bloodshed, and said with much warmth: 'Calling me by name, 'in less than sixty days we shall be cutting each others throats.' Nor was he alone in the opinion that civil war was almost inevitable. Others as cool headed as he was not only feared, but expected it.

Dean Stanley in Boston

The Rev. E. E. Hale in the Christian Union

What do you want to see?" said a friend to Dean Stanley when he landed in Boston. "Do you want to see people, institutions or every day life." Stanley laughed and said, "The old historical memories have broken out. I want to see history. Show me the Old Elm on Boston Common. I know it is blown down, but I want to see where it was. Show me anything which carries a reminiscence of Washington." He said his first business was to get a bird's eye view of the scene, that he might be sure of his topography, and accordingly he asked, first of all, to go to the top of the state house, in achievement from which, in these degenerate days, younger men ask to be excused. But Stanley when his visit to Boston ended, repeated the ascent, that he might fix the places he had seen. The athletic minister of Trinity, who was his guide, will not readily forget the alertness with which the historian sped up the stairs before him.

"Tell me what was the end of the federal party," he said to a puzzled young fellow of this generation—who could only repeat the question with a shudder. "Tell me where Roger Williams was buried"—and so on. His whole manner, with complete simplicity, showed how thoroughly he was conversant with the history of the land he travelled through, and how eager he was to improve his knowledge, even in detail. History was not history to him, unless he saw the picture as a best painter might do.

ABE ROBERTS,
Proprietor of Mountaineer.

Ruxton creek water is still roily from the effects of the recent storm.

Widow Bedott at the Opera House next Monday and Tuesday nights.

The new Colorado Springs directory will soon be ready for publication.

Deputy Sheriff Dana will accompany the excursion to the Grand Cañon to-day.

Several fine residences are now in the course of erection in the northern part of the city.

The Hook and Ladder company held a meeting in their rooms over the City drug last night.

Now that the tournament is over the firemen have abandoned their practice runs entirely.

The Widow Bedott company have posted some fine paper which is attracting considerable attention.

No definite arrangements have as yet been made for the proposed races at the Pike's Peak Driving park.

Agents are canvassing the city for a new directory of California, Montana, Nevada, Wyoming, Nebraska and Colorado.

The Hurdle coaches are now on the road and will probably be placed on our streets during the early part of September.

Pike's Peak travel still keeps up and a larger number of visitors have accomplished the ascent this year than ever before.

Only twenty-four hours have elapsed since the last heavy rain, and still the mud in the streets has almost entirely disappeared.

Judging from the amount of tickets sold it is fair to presume that the excursion to the Grand Cañon to-day will be a decided success.

The Denver and New Orleans railroad company is procuring the right of way through several of the ranches east of the city.

The excursion to the Grand Cañon of the Arkansas, under the auspices of the Odd Fellows, leaves the depot this morning at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Frank K. Davis, who has been spending the past two months with his brother, Mr. E. L. Davis, returned east yesterday via the Santa Fe.

Mrs. Judge Bowen, of Del Norte, who has been visiting friends in this city for some time past, returned to her home yesterday morning.

Reports that the president was lying at the point of death were circulated throughout the city yesterday afternoon, but they were entirely without foundation.

Alderman Walker is anxious for another conference with the spirits. He is confident that he could make some astonishing developments on another occasion.

In another column it will be noticed that Captain Graves offers for sale the Pascoe restaurant, unquestionably the best established and best paying restaurant in the city.

The J. M. Sigafus Hose company will be given a complimentary reception this evening at the residence of Mr. G. S. Barnes on Nevada avenue and the boys are looking forward to a very enjoyable time.

The Rev. J. R. Hill, of St. Louis, has taken possession of Crystal Park, and will at once commence making the much needed improvements. He leaves for St. Louis to-day on business of importance.

The contract has been let for working the Cheyenne Toll road through from Beaver park to Seven lakes, and it is expected that it will be open for carriages by the middle of next week. The hotel at the Seven lakes can accommodate from twenty to thirty guests, and parties who prefer to take their own tents will find good camping grounds at the lakes or at Beaver park, four miles this side. From the lakes to the summit of Pike's Peak by trail it is only four miles.

Annie Eva Fay and her assistants, whoever they may be, left the city at an early hour yesterday morning leaving several unsettled accounts and we understand that they make this their practice wherever they go. Among others who suffered was the dressmaker who provided the medium with the dress which she wore on the stage Sunday night. What advancement can spiritualism make in this or any other land if such impostors as Annie Eva Fay be allowed to travel the country and impose upon the people?

The Gothic Miner says that Mr. G. C. Bunting, of this city, one of the original owners of the Luoma mine, and now one of the largest stockholders, has just paid 50 cents, cash, for 2,500 shares of stock. Mr. Bunting ought to know the value of the mine. Mr. Wm. Mansfield has also purchased stock at the same rate.

Senator Alvin Saunders, of Nebraska, is visiting Colorado Springs. He is the guest of Mr. J. H. Barlow, of the El Paso Bank. He contemplates a visit to southern New Mexico, but he will not go until the president's condition is more favorable than it now is.

Information has just been received of the sad death of Mr. Jim Phillips in Kansas from the effects of sunstroke. Mr. Phillips was for some time a resident of this city and was doorkeeper of the house at the last session of the legislature.

Hunt's orchestra will in the future furnish the music at the Opera House.
